Questions 48 - 50

People are making lifestyle choices to reduce greenhouse gas emissions globally. Among greenhouse gases, carbon dioxide is the main reason for climate change and natural disasters, such as flooding and droughts. There are many things that we can do about our food, travel, and electricity to reduce the speed of global warming.

It is well known that the food system is responsible for at least 20 percent of greenhouse gases. A low carbon diet reduces emissions released from the production, packing, processing, transport, and preparation of food. It is recommended for one to buy organic food instead of eating imported, processed, and frozen foods. Eat only food which is in season or from your region. Avoid eating red meat and dairy products, which are the most emission-intensive foods. Other actions include eating a vegetarian diet and proper portion to reduce the waste of food.

48. What is the second paragraph about?

- (A) Organic Food (B) The Importance of Global Warming
(C) Low Carbon Diet (D) Natural Disasters

49. Which of the following is the main cause of global warming?

- (A) processed foods (B) droughts (C) carbon dioxide (D) electricity

50. To live on low carbon diet, which of the following is recommended?

- (A) Eat dairy products. (B) Take a large portion of food.
(C) Eat imported foods. (D) Eat locally grown foods.
